County wants housing study

Following the urging of representatives of Anson, Hindon and Minden Township Council, Haliburton County Council has endorsed a request to the Ministry of Housing for a study into the need for geared-to-income housing for Haliburton.

The endorsement came at the December 18 meeting of the county council, and followed some sharp wrangling between Minden Reeve Sinclair Nesbitt and several other members of the council.

Nesbitt had brought the matter to the county council's attention following a similar discussion by the Anson, Hindon and Minden council.

According to the reeve, there is a great need for geared-to-income housing or other forms of subsidized housing in the area. He said that the municipality's by-law enforcement officer, who is responsible for administering the welfare assistance to area residents, has found a number of incidents where families, especially those without fathers in the home, were in need of assistance over and above the amount provided through welfare, mother's allowance and other social benefits. It was pointed out that the province provides assistance to senior citizens through provincially constructed housing and the municipality should make an effort to have similar services provided for those in need who are not senior citizens.

Dysart Reeve Murray Fearry commented that a study carried out in his municipality several years ago showed there was only a need for two subsidized housing units and that the provincial government did not feel that constituted enough to start a program there.

Nesbitt said the study should be done on a county wide basis and that if there was an indication of a need that homes should be constructed, perhaps in several townships, to serve the entire county.

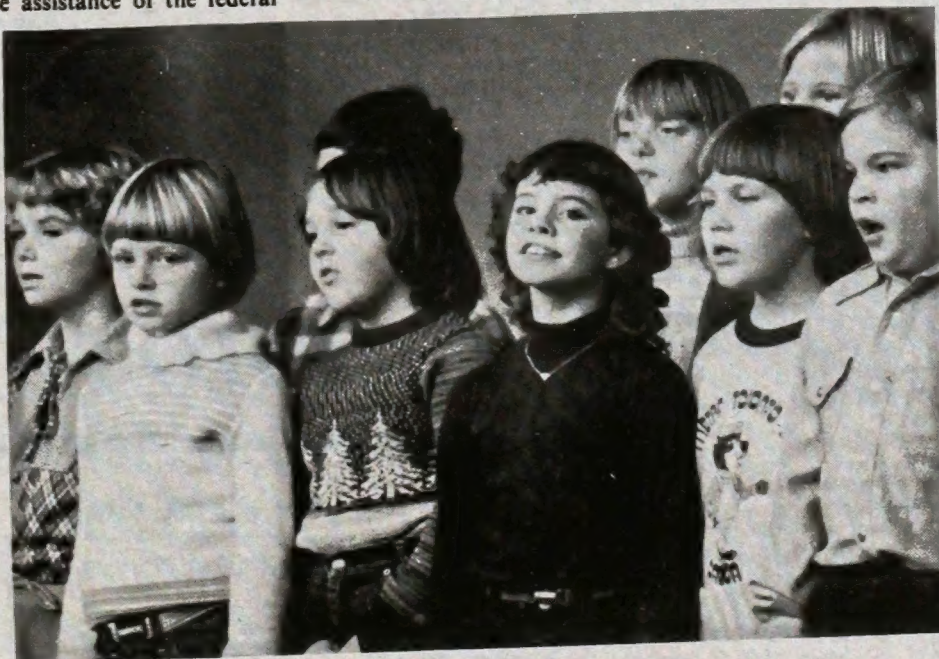

Fearry countered that position by suggesting that the construction should take place in areas where the need exists rather than moving families around the county to the housing. "I agree in principle with building these units, if there is a need," Fearry said, "but since the local municipality is responsible for 7% of the deficit from such an operation the study and construction should be done on a local basis."

Once the Ministry of Housing determines there is a need for geared-to-income housing in an area, the provincial government, with the assistance of the federal government will construct the required units. However, once in operation, the municipality is required to meet seven percent of the deficit resulting

Strategy approved

The development strategy for the County of Haliburton has now become an official document.

The December 18 meeting of County council was told that a letter was received December 13 from the Minister of Housing, Claude Bennett, announcing his endorsement.

I am pleased to inform you that I have endorsed your planning development strategy and municipal statements as an interim planning policy," the letter from the minister stated. "These documents will serve as a guide for development in the county until such time as an official plan is prepared."

Bennett congratulated the county council saying they had taken, "a major step forward."

The minister noted that the strategy was a reality because the councillors had been willing to make difficult decisions. He acknowledged that changes will have to be made to the document from time to time. "Over the long term, however, I am sure that you will find that these documents will be of great benefit to the county."

The formulation of the development strategy started earlier this year and reached fruition this fall. Approval of the study by the Haliburton council was granted in October.

Owners protest MTC action

Anson Hindon and Minden township council has come to the defence of two, and possibly more, landowners along Highway 121. The issue surfaced at the December 12 meeting of the council and concerned the plans of the Ministry of Transportation and Communications to widen the highway at certain locations.

The councillors were told that two landowners, Eldon Bull and Albert Cox have complained that the widening will result in the loss of property.

They have pointed out to municipal by-law enforcement officer Dick Schell, that the loss of land will mean their property is less than the one acre required for rural residential zoning. They are concerned this situation could result in problems later if they attempt to sell their property.

According to Schell, the highway work would take a 23 foot bite off the front of one property and 16 feet from another.

At the moment these are the only two property owners to have formally complained about the project, although others along the route between Minden and Haliburton may be facing the same dilemma.

The council was told that MTC has indicated that the by-law restrictions cannot stand in the way of the widening work.

A suggestion has been made that the MTC purchase land for the two affected parties to the side of each of the lots. This land could be added to their property to ensure the lots do not fall below the one acre minimum required by the township by-law.

Township Reeve Sinclair Nesbitt, was upset at the action of the ministry. He pointed out that there is vacant land available for the widening across the highway from these two properties and the MTC should be making use of this land.

The reeve also pointed out that the widening will result in the loss of a number of trees if the Bull and Cox properties are expropriated.

The resolution, which will be forwarded to the MTC, notes that the council objects to the plans to widen Highway 121 in such a manner as to create rural residential lots of less than one acre. It also points out the fact that lots of that size and with that zoning designation are contrary to the township's by-law.

Review of CAS requested by county

Haliburton County Council has agreed to press the provincial government for a complete review of the operations of the Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society. The request was contained in a motion approved at the December 18 meeting of the council.

According to the council's representative on the Children's Aid Society (CAS), Bicroft Improvement District Chairman Meredith Amm, the society is in a deficit position by $100,000. He told the meeting that over the past few years the CAS had overspent its provincial allotment with little or no concern for anyone. The CAS relies on the province for a large portion of its funding, but also receives a portion of its operating monies from the municipalities it serves. The Kawartha Haliburton CAS is funded by the City of Peterborough, the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria and Haliburton.

Amm told the meeting that the society had spent less this year than in previous years and suggested that the new restraint was based on the fact that members of the board of directors are coming to realize their financial responsibility to the taxpayers of the area.

He also told the councillors that the municipal representatives, each municipality has at least one spokesman on the board, are now being listened to by the other members. Amm had explained at a previous meeting that the board of directors was heavily weighted in favour of members appointed at large. He claimed this meant that those on the board who were there by virtue of their election to another council, were out-voted on almost all issues. Amm implied that since council representatives had to stand for re-election every two years, that they were more attuned to the needs of the taxpayers and aware of the need to be frugal with taxpayer's money.

He said he anticipated there would be tighter control of public funds by the CAS, rather than having it "thrown away."

The request for the overall review of the CAS operation had come from its own board of directors. The request suggests that the review be carried out immediately and that it be done by staff members from the Ministry of Community and Social Services.

Police charge trio following break-ins

Three Hamilton men have been charged with at least two break-ins in the Haliburton area during the past week. The charges were laid following an intensive investigation by Minden detachment OPP.

The charges arise out of incidents last week at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School and the Red and White Store in Norland.

Charged with two counts of break, enter and theft each are Douglas E. Cameron, 20, Anthony F. Stinellas, 20 and Jean Marc Plamondon, 22, all of Hamilton.

Police report that the high school was entered during the early morning hours of December 19. The intruders broke a window in the cafeteria to gain entry. Damage was done to a number of interior doors and door frames and to a television set. Initial estimates of damage range as high as $3000, although a spokesman for the school board said the cost to repair the damaged doors would be much less.

Police say nothing of value appears to have been removed from the school.

During the same morning, the Red and White store in Norland was entered and $2500 in property removed from the premises. Police believe the two incidents were carried out by the same people.

Two of the men charged, Cameron and Plamondon, were arrested and were being held in Lindsay Jail pending a bail hearing expected Monday (December 24). The third accused has been released and is scheduled to appear in court in Minden, January 15.

in mortgage payments and operating losses. These losses could result because the tenants may be exempt from paying the full rent, due to financial hardship.

Reeve Nesbitt was somewhat hesitant to accept the position of the Dysart Reeve. He said he doubted the provincial government would agree to build rental units throughout the county rather than in several central locations. "If that is how it will work, why don't we have the units now?" Nesbitt asked.

Nesbitt said there was a need for subsidized housing in every municipality in the county. "There are at least a half dozen people in each township that could benefit from such a program," he commented.

The Minden Reeve accused the other councillors of being more concerned with the potential cost to the municipality in meeting their seven percent share of the deficit, than with the welfare of the citizens. "We are just beating a dead horse if you say there is no need," Nesbitt commented. "There is a need. Our by-law enforcement officer is hard pressed to find an extra $10 to purchase needed fuel oil for some of our people."

John Francis, the Deputy

Reeve from Snowdon Township, suggested that the people who are in need of housing should be working instead of constantly turning to government for assistance. "These girls (referring to the mothers of fatherless families) should be out working," he commented. He noted that the county has already been approached for financial support for seniors in the area.

Reeve Nesbitt commented that while many of the women may be able to find work at a minimum wage, by the time they paid for babysitting services they were lucky to break even.

Dysart Deputy Reeve Harold Bannon pointed out that the housing study carried out in his municipality showed there were only two families in need of housing assistance. "There are a lot of houses for sale," he commented.

"How can you expect a woman on $200 assistance per month to buy a house," Nesbitt responded to the suggestion.

The council reached a compromise agreement in that the Ministry of Housing will be requested to carry out a needs survey throughout the entire county, but that the requirements will be identified on a municipality basis.

Group proposes treatment of acid-stressed lake

A proposal that might lead to at least a partial solution of the acid rain threat to Haliburton lakes was presented at the December 18 meeting of county council. The councillors indicated a great deal of interest in the project, although no formal action was taken by the group.

The proposal was presented by Sonya Holliday-Rhodes, of Minden, Chairman of the Haliburton County Anti-pollution Committee and an associate, Michael Collins, a resident of Gooderham.

"We propose to undertake the experimental liming of an acid stressed lake," Holliday-Rhodes told the meeting. She said the organisation was making the presentation to the council to seek their support for the project.

Michael Collins, a chemist who had worked in the Sudbury area in the 1930's and who is familiar with the damage acid rain can do to lakes, explained the group's proposal.

"We would like to do an acid content profile of Stormy Lake in Glamorgan Township," Collins told the meeting. "Once that is completed we would carry out a program of spreading finely ground limestone on the ice during the winter. During the following five years we would monitor the effects of the limestone on the acid levels to determine if any improvement in the quality of the lake took place."

He said that once the group had completed their studies they would present their findings to the provincial government as a program for saving other lakes in the area. Collins estimated that there are 2000 lakes threatened in the immediate area by acid rain and that 300 of those could possibly be saved by using the limestone treatment.

Collins emphasised that the program he is proposing calls for the use of ground limestone as opposed to pure lime. "Using pure lime would create a shock factor that would disturb the natural balance of the lake as much as the acid rain is doing," he commented. "Ground limestone would be released slowly into the water system." He predicted that one application of the ground limestone would protect a lake for up to ten years, although he suggested that the protection would be wearing thin by the end of that period.

The chemist had no figures on the cost of such a program.

He said the Stormy Lake location was chosen by the group because he has been taking acid level readings of the lake for a number of years. He said he has already established an acid profile of the lake. The lake is also located on the upper end of a watershed, an important factor in attempting to determine the success of the program.

He told councillors that the environmental committee, an offshoot of the anti-pollution group, was a volunteer organisation and that they were looking to the county for assistance. He said he was aware they would require permission from the provincial authorities before proceeding, but that he was seeking local encouragement first.

The chairman of the Haliburton County Anti-pollution Committee, Sonya Holliday-Rhodes, told the meeting that while the ultimate aim of the group is the reduction of pollutants at their source, they realise such a solution, in the next few years, is unlikely. She pointed out that the pressure building up against nuclear power and the threatened oil supplies has forced United States industry and power suppliers to turn more to coal, a prime source of the acidified precipitation now falling on this area.

"We expect technology to eventually triumph over this problem," Holliday-Rhodes told the meeting, "but in the meantime we must make an effort to protect the lakes because it is sure to be some time before the acid rain levels decrease."

Collins also told the group that recent acid levels in the Haliburton County area have been higher than those experienced in Sweden. Our lakes and rivers in the area are "at great risk" he told the meeting and something would have to be done soon to protect them.

Contradiction

When asked by Lutterworth Reeve Ron Gambell as to the effect acid rain is having on vegetation in the area, Collins said he believed the acid was leaching out nutrients from the soil. He said studies have shown a drop in growth rate occurs, there is scabbing on the plants and seed germination is cut.

Gambell noted that the Ministry of Environment scientists have appeared before the council and said there was no known damage to the vegetation. "Who is right?" he asked, "Who are we to believe?"

Sonya Holliday-Rhodes suggested that the Ministry of Environment should get out into the field and conduct their studies if they want to know what acid rain is doing to vegetation. She pointed out that experiments have taken place in laboratories but it was difficult to relate these to the natural environment.

Collins pointed out that field studies examining the effects of acid rain on vegetation may take up to 25 years before any conclusive answers are found. He said the time frame is just too long and that within that time period, a great deal of damage will be done to the lakes and rivers.

Reeve Sinclair Nesbitt suggested that if the county council decides to form a committee to study acid rain, that members of the pollution group be invited to serve on it. "We need input from the public on this," he commented.

While most of the councillors appeared interested in the program as suggested by Collins, no formal motion of support was passed by the group.

Council protest

County Council has finally passed a resolution urging action on the part of provincial and federal authorities to reduce the threat of acidified precipitation to Haliburton County. The resolution was passed at the December 18 meeting.

In November, the council had considered a similar motion but it had been set aside at the request of a number of councillors. They had been concerned that the original motion contained statements that may not be entirely true, or as yet unproven. It was felt that if those statements could be discredited, the entire intent of the resolution could be thrown into doubt.

The new resolution, passed without comment, reads as follows:

Whereas acid precipitation has been established as a very serious threat to our ecosystems and regional economies, and may render many lakes lifeless and affect the public health and welfare of citizens throughout North America;

And whereas the State of Ohio is refusing to enforce the Federal regulations of the Environmental Protection Agency;

And whereas the Province of Ontario continues to allow INCO's smelter at Copper Cliff to violate regulations and remain the largest single source of sulphur and nitrogen dioxide pollution in the North American continent;

Be it resolved that:

- The Canadian Federal Government be strongly urged by all to use their influence through the International Joint Commission to attempt to have pollution sources in the U.S. at least comply with existing Federal regulations; and that
- The Ontario Provincial Government be urged by all to take immediate action to enforce existing regulations on all existing sources of emission including INCO; and that

- All governments place a high priority on funding for research to improve our technology for dealing with this problem both at the source and at the point of impact; and that

- All governments review their existing emission control standards immediately and update them regularly in view of ongoing research findings.

Editorial

We received a request last week from a member of the Haliburton County School Board administration, that this newspaper not publish a report on the break-in and damage that took place at the high school on the morning of December 19. The caller, who subsequently suggested the newspaper "downplay" the incident, claimed to be making the request in the best interests of all schools in the area.

The reasoning behind the request was that a report of the incident would only spawn further such attempts at the high school, and perhaps at other educational institutions in the county. It was suggested that by reporting what had taken place at the high school this newspaper would be, if not encouraging others to do the same, at least planting a suggestion in the minds of those who might be inclined to break into buildings, but who had never considered the high school to be a likely target.

It was further suggested by the caller, that we would be doing the community a service by not reporting the incident, or at least not allowing it to dominate the news budget for the week. It was also pointed out that this newspaper, and others in the area, should be doing more to promote the positive aspects of the community which we serve, rather than dwelling on the negative.

We reject all aspects of this argument. The purpose of this newspaper is to report news, not to suppress it.

That is the basic premise any responsible publisher and editor should take in their relationship to the community they serve. At the same time, a newspaper has a responsibility to report on events in the community in a factual manner so as not to lend undue importance to an item of little consequence or "downplay" an incident that deserves careful scrutiny.

We are aware of the ability of the newspaper to influence public opinion, but would also point out that there are stronger forces at work moulding the fibre of the community. We find it difficult to understand the proposition that, if a person should read about an incident of vandalism in the newspaper, he or she will be filled with a sudden urge to commit a similar act. If the mere mention of such an incident in the newspaper is enough to trigger this response, then our society is in desperate shape.

We suggest, that the cause of vandalism and petty thievery can be traced right back to the homes of those who commit such acts. It is only through proper training in the home that we can hope to reduce the growing incidence of wanton destruction. It is both unfair and incorrect to point an accusing finger at the media for the shortcomings in the home life of certain individuals.

The suggestion that this newspaper suppress the news, besides being contrary to the entire philosophy of a responsible community newspaper, takes on a somewhat "Alice in Wonderland" approach to the matter when one considers that most, if not all of the 700 students and staff at the high school would have at least some knowledge of what took place early Wednesday morning. Presumably, most would discuss the matter with their parents and others outside the school. Immediately 2100 people, in all corners of the county, have at least some knowledge of the incident.

A report in the newspaper then is "old news" for many, and can actually help to set the record straight, to ensure the public is aware of the facts rather than having to rely on rumour and embellished accounts.

As to the suggestion that newspapers dwell only on the negative aspects of life in the community they

by Hal Burton

You're darned tootin', as the man who operated a beanyery once said, I'll run.

And, with that formal announcement, I, one Haltron Ichabod Burton, have indicated with great humility and ingratitudes, that I will indeed run for and seek, to the best of my ability, the seat of your member of Parliament, in and for this great and glorious constituency in which we all live, sometimes.

I can tell you, my friends, it is not a decision I take lightly or without undue reservation and aplomb. It was only after a great deal of conjugation and rumination, that I decided to toss my pants into the ring.

And that, perhaps, is one of the most appropriate metaphors to use as politics is much like a ring, a bull ring - where those who dare must enter clad only in their most colourful and bespeckled garb to do battle with the bull. It is a challenge but few can entertain, and one that leaves me breathless with anticipation and somewhat puzzled as to the exact location of my trousers.

Yes my friends, just as a matador must tease and toy with his adversary, we, cut from the cloth of politicians, must also dare the bull, taunt it and flaunt it and throw it up high. The bull must become like putty in our hands. We must mould it and shape it with dazzling perfection, so that even those in the stands who dare to observe must marvel at the transformation that has made the bull unrecognizable.

Like great artists and sculptors, we work with our medium, transmuting the earthen image of the bull into one of immense proportions and import. With skill and dexterity, we manoeuvre the bull about the ring, impressing the audience with our erudition and subtraction.

In many ways it is but a "danse de mort" for, though there are many matadors to show off the bull, only one will survive when the masses have voted. Yes, he who handles the bull the best, he who impresses the crowd the most with his ability to get the bull across, he who transmogrifies the bull into the most ethereal and mysterious apparition, will gain the favour of the crowd. And only he will walk from the great arena, arms tenderly clutching all that bull, to join the great bull ring on the Rideau.

It is not, my friends, and I say this with the deepest sincerity, a spurn of the moment decision. This is not a responsibility I take disinterestedly or with the slightest disintegration. The hours are great, the pension is excellent and the food is cheap. No, the clarion blast of buffoon's bugle beckons me. Be still oh beating heart—over yonder lies the challenge, before you lies.

For the moment, however, I shall rest upon my well placed laurels. Though the excitement and heat of the battle surges through my veins, arteries and caterpillars, I must wait and gather strength. Yea, though I am in heat, the battle will not begin until the new decade has struck us foursquare upon the forelock.

For those doubters among you who would question my background, and indeed my ability to serve as the representative of this prosperous, provisional and proud area in the House of Commons, I need but point most modestly to the long and extinguished career as an author and journalist (most notably in this learned journal) as an indication of my conceptual heritage. Further, I would ask those who would cast aspersions (remembering the admonition, "let he who is without asp, cast the first etc. etc."), to scan the ranks of those who have just been summarily dismissed from the benches to the right and left of Mr. Speaker. Is there, and I ask you in all sincerity my friends, and you are my friends, sincerely, gold nuggets to be found among those who rank there? Or is it that my eye and your's perceives fool's gold or dross among the moss? I ask not for a Senate seat. I want to sit in the House of Commons, for I am as worthy and as common as any of them.

Yes, dear friends, I have thrown down my gauntlet, hurled my challenge and tossed my hat. This may be a very violent campaign, but I am willing to undergo the severest test and matriculation to gain a victory. All hail, amigos, and believe me you are my amigos. Land ho! The campaign is anon. Forbear your sheath and musk your pinnacle, the gladiator rides out to stew the dragon. Stand back, watch out for fallen rocks or crocks, it is a fight to the death, or worse.

Democracy has never been in safer hands.

Future columns will add to the clarity and precision needed to make my campaign a triumphant success.

By: Roger Worth

"For many years, New York lived with the illusion of prosperity. We believed it was every man's dream to come and live here".

Morton Getman, Senior Vice President of the New York Board of Trade was trying to explain to a reporter why the Big Apple had lost 500,000 jobs in six years in the manufacturing sector alone and another 100,000 because head offices moved away from the city.

The problem became serious enough for the likes of David Rockefeller of the Chase Manhattan Bank, the powerful New York Telephone Co., the New York Port Authority, the Chemical Bank and other business leaders to take a hand.

The now familiar "I love New York" campaign came out of these discussions, but what is not so well known is that the underlying strategy the powerful business magnates selected to reverse the horrendous drain on New York's economy was to attract and develop small and medium-size independent business.

Suddenly, leaders of big business are saying that sound economic planning for their city does not depend on the location of head offices that will move away at the first sign of trouble.

The New York Port Authority put it this way: "When a small or medium size business locates in a community, you can be sure it will remain there for a good length of time. And the multiplier effect is higher than for any other type of business activity".

Overnight, it seemed, small became beautiful. Even in New York. And while ivory tower economic planners are talking "economies of scale" and "rationalizing" business and industrial activity, the prestigious Massachusetts Institute of Technology is publishing a massive study indicating 66% of all new jobs created in the U.S. between 1969 and 1977 were due to firms with less than 20 employees.

A similar study conducted in this country by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business gave just about the same results: 59% of all new jobs between 1971 and 1977 were created by firms with fewer than 20 employees.

Meanwhile, federal and provincial government technocrats in Canada have been reluctant to accept Federation conclusions about the crucial importance of the small business sector.

Now that New York has moved, perhaps Canada's independent business sector can expect more concrete action.

Kudos for ambulance crew

There was an unexpected bouquet awaiting the members of the Minden ambulance service following the December 12 meeting of the Anson, Hindon and Minden township council. The bouquet came in the form of a letter from a previous client.

Elmer Ewan of Toronto, had been working on the roof of his garage on Ransley Road, when he fell. He was seriously hurt. His wife, who had a leg in a cast from a previous accident, was unable to be of assistance, so the ambulance service was called.

Ewan said in his letter that the ambulance arrived swiftly and "proper and efficient action was taken." The ambulance crew was under the direction of Robert Luke.

Ewan commented that he was in a position to assess the efforts of the ambulance crew since he had served as unit commander with the Metropolitan Toronto Police Force, and had witnessed many accidents.

"The courtesy extended by this proficient member will not be forgotten," the letter concluded.

Robert Luke has recently been appointed probationary supervisor of the local ambulance service.

EDC approves const.

The Haliburton County Economic Development Commission has prepared a final draft of its constitution.

The document, which will govern the internal workings of the organisation, was approved at a meeting of the body December 19 in Minden.

The constitution must now be presented to the county council, which as the major funding body, has to approve the document. The constitution is expected to come before the county councillors at the January meeting.

No goal

With the net full of opposition player there is little chance for the Minden Atoms, (white jerseys), to get the puck past the Manvers' goalie. The action was part of a game Saturday afternoon at the Minden arena. Minden went down to a 3-2 loss at the hands of the visitors.

Puck talk

The following results of the hockey action last week were compiled by the Minden Minor Hockey Association.

Atoms

The Minden Atoms had rather a quiet week since their game Monday night in Omeme had to be cancelled due to poor driving conditions. However at the arena on Saturday they lost a close encounter with the team from Manvers 3 to 2. Picking up the goals for Minden were Tom MacLeod and Scott Nesbitt.

Pee Wees

The Minden Pee Wees did not fare any better, as their game in Omeme was also cancelled. At home on Saturday they went down to the Manvers squad 5 to 1. Minden made the score-sheet at 10.15 of the third period as Paul Walker scored unassisted.

The Minden team received 10 minutes in penalties while Manvers picked up 12 minutes.

Bantam

Minden Bantams ended the week on a winning note. After losing a squeaker 6 to 5 in Omeme on Tuesday and 9 to 2 in Haliburton on Friday, they came up big against Manvers shutting out the visitors 3 to 0. After a scoreless first and second period, the third period proved different as Eldon Bull picked up a true hat trick scoring three straight goals. His first was unassisted, second from Robbie MacLeod and his final goal from Kevin Warburton and Tim Wood.

In the final minutes of play, Manvers pulled their goalie in favour of extra attackers to try to break the shutout, but to no avail - Colin Newell stood firm and earned his shut-out.

Midget

In Omeme December 18 - Minden 7, Omeme 7. Scoring for Minden were Greg Austin, Brent Moxam, Ivan Ingram and Terry Allore with one each and Ron Yake with a nice hat trick.

They again went to town against Manvers at Minden on Saturday December 22 coming out 12 to 0. Scorers for Minden were Brent Moxam with 2, Terry Allore, 1, Ron Yake 4, Ivan Ingram 2, Kevin Hamilton, 1, Kevin Shapiera with 2. The shutout was recorded by Terry Crowe.

Salvatori new board chairman

The Haliburton County Board of Education has a new chairman for the 1980 term. Leonard Salvatori, a trustee from the municipality of Dysart et al, was chosen by his colleagues to head the board, at the inaugural meeting held December 18.

Salvatori replaces Lloyd Johnson of Minden, who had served as chairman during 1979.

The first meeting of the new term also saw the selection of Ross Anderson Jr., trustee for Monmouth, as the vice-chairman for the coming year. Both posts were filled by acclamation.

Salvatori and Anderson have been members of the board since it was first created in 1968. During that time they have worked on most of the committees of the board and both have previously been chairman of the board, Salvatori in 1970 and Anderson in 1973.

The outgoing chairman, Lloyd Johnson, expressed his appreciation to the members of the board for their support and assistance during 1979. He was particularly pleased with the work of those who

Scott seeks PC nod

Victoria-Haliburton MP, Bill Scott, has announced his intention to seek the Progressive Conservative nomination for the February 18 Federal election. The MP announced his decision in a press release on December 19.

Scott was first elected to Parliament in 1965 and has served as the area MP since then. He has fought in five election campaigns.

His announcement was the first stirring by any political party in the riding since the defeat of the Clark government earlier this month.

The Progressive Conservative nominating meeting is scheduled to be held January 12 in Lindsay.

AROUND THE TOWN

by Jeanne Sears

Old is the world but new the year
What are you going to do
A challenge this, to you!
A lot of lonely folk there are
And many sad or ill,
If you've been kind to some,
why not be even kinder still?
There's nothing folk need more today
Than cheer to help them on their way

Anon

With the above in mind, don't forget this chap at Hyland Crest having his birthday January 2, Hugh McEachern, and while you're there, visit some of your other friends who may be there.

At the weekly mini card party at St. Paul's Parish Hall
last Thursday afternoon,
winners were for cribbage Vera Ward (with a perfect score) and Jeanne Sears and for Euchre, lone hands Freda Harrison, Marjorie Coulter and Pearl Cowan. There will be no card parties until January 3 at 1.30 - see you then!

We hear there will be skating for preschoolers at the Arena Thursdays from 2 - 3 beginning January 3.

The Rotary Club are having their New Year Party as usual, sounds like a good time, the tickets are on sale at various places but you can get yours at the door that evening.

The Orange Lodge Ladies plan a card party for Thursday January 3 at 8 p.m.

Were you ready for Christmas?
My house was a "mess"
With gifts all sorted and tagged
My wrappings seemed always so ragged
The baking's all done - now to find a place to store. Don't remind me that company's coming

When all the time I'd rather be going Good thing Christmas comes but once a year
Another time wouldn't do for me I fear
So here's a wish as old as the hills Hope Santa came and overfilled
Your home with Holiday
Glee,
Enough to last all through the
New Year

Jay

The Rotary Turkey Bingo
on December 18 was well attended but some people won several times while others not at all. The word is out no Bingo till later in the winter
but back to Thursday nights.
We will keep you posted.

The Ed Pettingers and Maisie McIntosh were Sunday guests with the F.
Pettingers of Peterborough.

On the Turkey Draw at Stedmans, lucky winner was
Mrs. Marj Menton of Hall's Lake.

Sincere sympathy goes to the family and friends of the late Alice Fearrey whose funeral was Saturday. Also to the Harvey McIntosh family who had several deaths recently.

All their friends send good wishes to these people who are in hospital or have come home, Leroy Nesbitt, Jim Austen and Earl Bird.

Mr & Mrs. Alec Beattie and family of Richmond Hill, Mr & Mrs. Fred Hewitt and family of Scarborough, Colin Hewitt and Neil Hewitt of Carleton Place will be visiting with Mrs. Ern Hewitt during the holidays.

Mrs. Jim Beattie is going to visit in the Toronto area over
the holidays.

Home for Christmas from Thunder Bay area are Lorne Snell and Lee Austen.

Gerald Coulter of Toronto is spending Christmas time with his parents, Mr & Mrs.
Angus Coulter

We heard that Mrs. R.
Krick has her arm in a cast
after all, hope you are soon better

Judy and Junior Coulter of Calgary are spending the holiday with their sister Susan Coulter of Kinmount.

May Wright is spending
Christmas with the Ted Johnsons of Scarborough and Randy and June will be staying at their own home and Randy will attend school with his former classmates.

Holiday guests with the Gordon Monks will be his father, Jack Monk of Elmwood and her mother,
Isabel Lockie of Newmarket.

The John Hobbs leave over the weekend for a Christmas visit with the Lonnie Hughes of Keswick

Guests Christmas Day with the Morgan Trumbulls are to be the Dale Trumbulls of Richmond Hill, the Jim Sawyers of Oshawa and the Bernard Trumbulls.

Ring out false pride in place and blood

The civic slander and the spite,
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good

Ring in the valiant man and free
The larger heart, the kinder hand
Ring in the Year that is to be.
Alfred Lord Tennyson

While doing this on Saturday, it is raining, hope it changes so we keep our white scenery, drive carefully and have a happy Holiday.
Cheerio till next time!
